

Sri Lankan grey langur

The Sri Lankan grey langur is endemic to Sri Lanka. They are omnivores and like to eat leaves, flowers, small animals and insects. They live in large groups with lots of males and lots of females. Unfortunately, the Sri Lankan grey langur is Endangered. Their rainforest home is being cut down for logging and for farming. Sri Lankan grey langurs are considered pests and people sometimes shoot, poison or snare them. They are also killed for their meat.

